This is a family photo celebrating my reelection to the Senate in 2014. From left to right, my cousin's wife Olga, my nephew's mom Mia, my aunt Nita, my cousin Otis, my mom Frances, my niece Kendra and her husband Marcus, my granddaddy, and my nephew Ben.

My mom and me at Bon Secours St. Francis Hospital where she has worked since 1973. This was taken in 2018 when I surprised her with flowers for Valentine's Day.

My mom in 1983;
she was thirty-nine.

My grandparents Artis and Louida in their living room in North Charleston. If I remember correctly, this was taken on Christmas morning.

My granddaddy tending his garden in North Charleston.
Gardening was one of his favorite past times.

In 1966 I was one year old. My aunt Nita has been one of my greatest champions for as long as I can remember.

My official Midland Park Elementary School picture of 1975. I was ten years old.

My official Stall High School senior picture. This was the year I won the election for student body government president.

My junior year of high school. It was a 1982 touchdown run that I can still remember vividly. It was my favorite year of football by far and just one season before my life-changing car accident.

Taken in 1982, just a year after I first met John Moniz. John was a true mentor who taught me so many things, not least of which was the power of pursuing God-size dreams.

Greg and Kassy Alia on their wedding day in 2015. I never had the honor of meeting Greg, who was a police officer in Richard County South Carolina. Greg was killed in the line of duty on September 30, 2015. Kassy is a force of nature. After Greg's death, she launched www.serveandconnect.org.

This is Greg, Kassy, and their son Salvatore Alia. This photo was taken just four months before the loss of Greg.

My friend and brother Brian Moniz. Brian is also the son of my mentor John Moniz. I tell his story in these pages. He is a man of true integrity and one of my oldest friends. Brian is a police officer in Charleston County.
